

E1 Gold: Lean

P(Lean) = 53.97%

... However, since we need the three people to sit consecutively, we're essentially looking for the number of ways to place two markers ...

E2 Gold: Python

P(Lean) = 51.91%

... However, this doesn't give us a straightforward way to enumerate probabilities without considering all combinations. ...

E3 Gold: Python

P(Lean) = 52.49%

... but this seems to be an encoded or unclear representation. ... we can't directly proceed to calculate the sum of squares ...

Normalized Lean-logit attribution: orange opposes · blue supports